

Short Communication

About Over-Indebtedness Versus Total Quality Management

Adib Ben Jebara

Retired researcher, Tunis, Tunisia. E-mail: Adib.jebara@topnet.tn; adibbenjebara@gmail.com

Received July, 2020; Accepted July, 2020

We should always think about quality management, that is what makes it total. The true meaning of over-indebtedness in two words is dark future. The main cause of over-indebtedness is the lack of efficiency in managing funds for efficiency means cost as low as possible and good lead time. At the level of countries, there are sometimes too many social measures and then social measures are not possible any more. The International Monetary Fund now pretends being concerned about social measures while it is only concerned about GDP.

Another cause of over-indebtedness is the lack of a strategy with flexibility and logic. The more general cause is anti-intellectualism. There is even some dishonesty in over-indebtedness. Anti-intellectualism leads to over-consumption. Over-production occurs when all are producing the same things. It is all a matter of new ideas. Our Age tries to make us believe that it is producing a lot of new ideas while it is not when it comes to really new ideas. The hurdles to really new ideas are: anti-intellectualism, bureaucratic behavior, extreme specialization and not being result oriented. Most of the time, new ideas give shortcuts.

REFERENCES

- About bad behavior versus total quality management Adib Ben Jebara <https://www.ajbm.com/wp-content/uploads/2020/05/1355051.pdf>
About afterlife and other research Adib Ben Jebara Lambert Academic Publishing 2020 <https://www.morebooks.shop/store/gb/book/about-afterlife-and-other-research/isbn/978-620-0-58812-8>